27 million Russians died defeating the last Nazi regime in Europe. Did you really think they were going to allow a second Nazi regime directly on their border?

Deaths by Soviet republic
Soviet Republic	Population 1940	Military Dead	Civilian Dead	Total	Deaths as % 1940 Pop.
Total USSR	194,090,000	10,700,000	15,900,000	26,600,000	13.7%
Russian SFSR	110,100,000	6,750,000	7,200,000	13,950,000	12.7% (A)
Ukrainian SSR	41,340,000	1,650,000	5,200,000	6,850,000	16.3% (B)

the russian regime held its own #ProWarRally , btw. Interesting that they don't ask whether russia's neighbors (such as Ukraine, Poland, the USA etc) should allow a fascist regime "directly on their border"

Oliver Stone Asked Vladimir Putin to Be His Daughter's Godfather

Director Oliver Stone asked Russian president Vladimir Putin to be his daughter's godfather in a recent interview, the transcript of which has been published on the Kremlin's website.

Oliver Stone on Vladimir Putin: "The Russian people have never been better off"

Dominic Rushe

The veteran director has been accused of pandering to Putin for his four-hour documentary on the Russian leader, but he remains unrepentant. Could it be the climax to his career?

Oliver Stone: "Everything I did was examined by a certain light. And as an artist it's very limiting."
Photograph: Suki Dhanda/The Observer

And this is—it's not working, and what Putin is saying in general is: lay off; back away. You cannot run war exercises all the time on our borders; you cannot talk this language of calling us the aggressor. And that's what's very interesting to me, is the United States media always say—every day I see it in the newspaper or this or that—the Russian invasion, the coming Russian invasion of Ukraine.

Now, this is outrageous, because first of all, they have no proof that Russia intends to invade Ukraine; I doubt that they would. I think Russia is concerned only with the Donbass region. The Donbass region being the eastern sector where the Russian-speaking people are threatened by the Ukrainian government. Why? Because, we saw back in 2014, they were killing them. There was quite a bit of murder going on, and the Ukrainian government did not want to recognize the historic autonomy of the eastern Ukraine, of the people who speak Russian. In fact, Russian language was banned in Ukraine, if you remember correctly.

4 In November 2013, Galloway and his wife Gayatri began to present Sputnik for the RT network, a Russian government-backed station formerly known as Russia Today. ... In an overview of the broadcasting organisations Galloway works for, Tom Rogan in the National Review in April 2014 described him as being "a Western puppet for tyranny's propagandists". In the register of members' financial interests published at the end of January 2015, Galloway disclosed that he had earned £293,450 from his television broadcasting in the previous year and had received almost £70,000 in travelling expenses and hotel stays. For the period November 2013 to February 2015, Galloway was paid £100,000 for his appearances on RT, the highest payment to any British politician working for the channel.

— Wikipedia, George Galloway

I tell him how much I like his suit. He looks pleased, and thanks me. I ask him what make it is. He shows me the label to the jacket - Kenzo. Is that a designer label? "It's famous, but not top of the label." I later discover that you can't get much more "top of the label" than Kenzo.

Galloway is known for his suits, for his fat cigars and expensive cars. And the money from the Mail helps him enjoy his lifestyle. Even your friends say you're on the vain side, I say. "Well if that means do I take care to look my best before I leave the house in the morning, if that's vanity, then I'm guilty of it." He says his father, God rest him, was the same, and what's wrong with a little self-respect?

45 The Workers Party stands with all those countries that have attempted to break free of imperialist domination and build a different kind of world. We defend the achievements of the USSR, China, Cuba etc, not least the debt owed by humanity to the Soviet Union and Red Army in their war of liberation against German fascism.

The Workers Party defends the independence and right to development of those countries that are today undermined and attacked by imperialism, not least the heroic Venezuelan people.

We categorically reject the attempt by the ruling class, its paid agents and the EU imperialist bloc to rewrite history so as to equate the Soviet Union with Hitlerite Germany. "The Truth About Tiananmen Square" lewrockwell.com/2009/06/justin...

With the standard of living and growth rates rapidly rising, ordinary Chinese have never been better off. But that does not satisfy the "human rights" crowd: far from it. China may be taking the capitalist road, they carp, but it is still a long way from achieving "democracy." This obsession with capital-d Democracy overshadowed Clinton's trip to China, and so skewed the focus of the American media, and, ultimately, the President himself, that the main subject of public discussion was not the dramatic achievements of the post-Mao destatization, in which a billion people lifted themselves up out of serfdom. Instead, the President engaged in an hour-long colloquy with Chinese premier Jiang Zemin on the 1989 Tiananmen Square incident, in which a few hundred rioters bent on self-immolation achieved their stated ends.

THE MYTH OF TIANANMEN

The Tiananmen Square "massacre" is an incident so wrapped up in mythology, most of it generated by Western journalists and their professional dissident friends, that it is nearly impossible for any "revisionist" analysis to be given a hearing. The world saw the Goddess of Democracy, the bright banners and youthful idealism of the protesters, a giant rock-concert held under the gaze of the seemingly incongruous Chairman Mao, whose gargantuan portrait dominates the Square.

The Grayzone

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

In December 2015, Blumenthal was invited to Russia Today's tenth-anniversary party. Of course, there were many interesting and famous people at that party, besides Putin and the channel heads. For example, retired lieutenant general and former director of US military intelligence Michael Flynn. As it became known later, Flynn was paid 45 thousand dollars for his performance at the party. American performance at the party. American journalist Eric Alterman, who writes for The Nation, named other people who received speaking fees. Blumenthal was among them. Max never confirmed financial ties with RT — he only wrote about his love for the channel and its "impartiality and objectivity" in covering events. He criticized the US for recognizing the media as a "foreign agent."

Ludwig von Mises on isolationism and russia:
mises.org/library/money-...

... protectionism and still more autarky provoke conflicts.

The Second World War was not caused by Nazism alone. The failure of all other nations to erect in time a barrier against a possible aggression was no less instrumental in bringing about the disaster than the plans of the Nazis and the other Axis powers. If the Nazis had expected to encounter on the first day of hostilities a united and adequately armed force of all those nations which have come united in fighting them, they would never have ventured an assault. But collective security is unavailable among nations bitterly fighting one another in the economic sphere. Economic nationalism has divided the peace-loving nations. If the United Nations do not succeed in breaking away economic nationalism, peace conditions will not differ from those prevailing in the years between the two World Wars. Then a third and much more dreadful war is unavoidable.

Every nation has to choose. The United States too. The alternative is only among the peace-loving nations or return to the chaos out of which new conflict will originate. But unity is incompatible with protection. Every day experience avers that the good neighbor policy among the American republics comes into collision with economic nationalism. How should Latin America and the European democracies enter into a close political collaboration with the United States if their citizens suffer from American foreign trade policies?

... rise, even among the Russian people there are some who do not share this attitude. It is only to be noted that they have not been able to prevail over their competitors. Ever since Russia was first in a position to exercise an influence on European politics, it has continually behaved like a robber who lies in wait for an opportunity when he can pounce upon his victim and plunder him of his possessions. At no time did the Russians acknowledge any other limits to the expansion of their empire than those dictated by the force of circumstances. The position of the Bolsheviks in regard to the problem of the territorial expansion of the Russian empire is not a whit different. They too acknowledge no other rule than that, in the conquest of new territory and indeed must go as far as one dares, with due regard to one's resources. The fortunate circumstance that saved civilization from being destroyed by the Russians was the fact that the nations were strong enough to be able successfully to stand off the onslaught of the hordes of Russian warriors. The experiences of the Russians in the Napoleonic Wars, the Crimean War, and the Turkish campaigns showed them that, in spite of the great number of their soldiers, their army is unable to subvert Europe. The World War merely confirmed this.

... get realized this fact. They regard this way "It is a very deplorable fact that the peoples of Europe are fighting one another, that they have wrecked their glorious civilization and that they are consequently doomed to starvation and misery. It is no less deplorable that similar things happen in Asia. Unfortunately we cannot save them from disaster. They themselves have to learn that peaceful cooperation would be more beneficial to them than war and mutual extermination. We cannot police the whole world. All we can do is to look out for ourselves and to preserve the Western Hemisphere's independence. We will keep neutral, will not interfere with other countries' affairs and thus preserve our American way of life."

... But it is not without concern for America what happens in the rest of the world. The establishment of two big isolationist empires, one on the other side of the Atlantic, one on the other side of the Pacific, would have been a tremendous measure to America's political independence. The German nationalists had always emphasized that the last goal of their ambitions was the conquest of a large colonial domain on the American continent. The present writer is not familiar with the Japanese language and does not know whether Japanese economists and publicists were equally frank in their printed utterances. But he knows from conversations with many Japanese professors and students that they considered the Americans and not the Chinese, their main enemy.

II. Russia

The law-abiding citizen by his labor serves both himself and his fellow man and thereby integrates himself peacefully into the social order. The robber, on the other hand, is intent, not on honest toil, but on the forcible appropriation of the fruits of others' labor. For thousands of years the world had to submit to the rule of military conquerors and feudal lords who simply took for granted that the products of the industry of other men existed for them to consume. The evolution of mankind towards civilization and the strengthening of social bonds required, first of all, overcoming the intellectual and physical influence of the military and feudal castes that aimed to rule the world and the substitution of the ideal of the bourgeois for that of the hereditary lord. The supplanting of the militaristic ideal, which exerts only the warlike and despotic honest labor has not, by any means, even yet been completely achieved. In every nation there are still individuals whose minds are altogether taken up with the ideas and images of the militaristic age. There are nations in which inherent aristocratic impulses toward plunder and violence, which one would have presumed to have long since been mastered, still break out and once more gain ascendancy. But, by and large, one can say of the nations of the West now that today inhibit central and eastern Europe and America that the mentality that nurtured Spain...

Ron Paul | USA TODAY

Residents of Crimea voted over the weekend on whether they would remain an autonomous region of Ukraine or join the Russian Federation. In so doing, they joined a number of countries and regions — including recently Scotland, Catalonia and Venice — that are seeking to secede from what they view as unresponsive or oppressive governments.

Vladimir Putin's remarks at the 11th meeting of the Valdai International Discussion Club are worth more than a link in my latest column. These are the remarks of a humanitarian political leader, the like of which the world has not seen in my lifetime. Compare Putin to the corrupt war criminal in the White House or to his puppets in office in Germany, UK, France, Japan, Canada, Australia, and you will see the difference between a criminal clique and a leader striving for a humane and livable world in which the interests of all peoples are respected.

The real reason why the west hates Lukashenko has nothing to do with concern for democracy or human rights. It is instead that, as a genuinely popular politician who has preserved his country from the worst ravages which economic reform has inflicted on its neighbours, Lukashenko is not given to taking orders. In this respect, he is unlike any of the other senior former communist officials currently hobnobbing in Prague. The west's friends in eastern Europe today have their hands firmly on the commanding heights of political control in their countries, just as in many cases they personally did under communist dictatorship.

Russia's New Face to the World

2. (C) What is now known as The Institute for Democracy and Cooperation (IDC) was previewed in a speech by Putin on October 26, 2007 at the Mafra EU-Russia Summit. At that time, Putin expressed a wish to cooperate with Europe to "ensure the free election process and monitor elections, the status of national minorities and the freedom of speech." Putin's speech was followed by a proposal by Public Chamber member Anatoly Kucherena, who suggested that the IDC be an independent think tank headquartered in Moscow with branch offices in New York and Paris. In a February 6 conversation, Kucherena claimed that the IDC would seek to cooperate with EU and the U.S. organizations in the area of civil society and democracy and, secondarily, work to improve the image of Russia abroad. Kucherena rejected suggestions that the Institute or its offices would produce anti-western propaganda, as some media reports have suggested (reftel).

As of this writing, Ukrainian president Volodymyr Zelensky is hunkered down in his bunker somewhere in Kiev, as the sound of the encroaching war gets closer and closer. A grim scene, to be sure.

All the US and EU kisses and roses leading up to this end have turned to dust and barbed wire, as a no-doubt deeply bitter Zelensky has nothing left but to cry out in anger:

Zelensky earlier: "Who is ready to fight with us? I do not see anyone. Who is ready to give Ukraine a guarantee of NATO membership? Everyone is afraid."

— ASB News / MILITARY 🇺🇸 (@ASBMilitary) February 25, 2022

The chips are down, as much of the US-equipped and backed Ukrainian military appears to have turned and ran as Russian forces approached. That is not to say that there has not been death and destruction on both sides. The battle for Kherson was brutal, with plenty of Russian losses. But nevertheless, as of this writing, it has fallen to Russian control.

Kiev in the main may well fall within the next 12-24 hours. Russian troops are already in the city. And Zelensky is in his bunker with fewer and fewer to take his calls. The cavalry he believed was promised him will not be coming to rescue him. Ukraine will be demilitarized and Ukraine will be neutral. Once held up as a great ally of Washington and Brussels, Zelensky is alone.

It brings to mind that great quote I often recycle from RPI academic advisor John Laughland, written as the early US-backed color revolutions rampaged through the former Soviet world in the early 2000s:

Bloody Fangs of the New World Order
Posted by Daniel McAdams at March 11, 2006 08:35 AM

Today's apparent death of former Serbian president Slobodan Milosevic bares the bloody fangs of the New World Order, a totalitarian construct of the United States and allies to fill in the post Cold War void.

"If we cannot convict you on our lies, we will at least make sure you don't get out alive."

Let us recall that Milosevic was captured – kidnapped – by the NWO shock troops in exchange for aid promised to a Serbia recently decimated by NATO bombs to halt a genocide that subsequent investigation proved a lie by the Clinton Administration and dutifully amplified in the lap-dog media.

The initial charges of genocide in Kosovo were so obviously trumped up – there was the problem of a lack of bodies – that the Hague kangaroo court was forced to drop that central part of its case. Chief prosecutor Carla del Ponte was herself quoted as saying that no genocide charges were brought against Milosevic, "because there is no evidence for it."

The court then scrambled to find something else with which to charge Milosevic, all the while Milosevic rotted away in a jail cell convicted of nothing.

Milosevic's real crime in the eyes of the Hague was that he did not do what was expected: confess to all the crimes you can think of, bow to the authority of the court, accept your sentence. How DARE he question the authority of the Hague Tribunal?!? Like their moral and historical forebears the international tribunals are all set up with only one conclusion possible: conviction. Though perhaps the court did not get the conviction they wanted in the Milosevic case, I suppose in their eyes they did get the next best thing.

Putin's puppy needs a name

Posted on November 19, 2010

As the Globe and Mail reports, Prime Minister Putin "is asking for the public's help in naming a Bulgarian shepherd puppy he received earlier this week as a gift from Bulgarian Prime Minister Boyko Borisov."

According to the paper, the pup was originally named Yorgo, but the Russian prime minister is considering options.

The Return of Putin

With the announcement today by Prime Minister Putin that he will run again for president next year, it seems a good time to revisit the idea of the Daily Putin — a mix of political reflection on Russia and its environs and an appreciation of probably the most interesting man in world politics today.

7/10/20 Ryan Dawson on Cancel Culture, Police Reform and the War on Drugs

Scott talks to Ryan Dawson about cancel culture and the latest wave of deplatforming, of which Dawson himself is a victim. Dawson, who spends much of his time fighting against the neoconservative ideology, has come under fire over and over again for the alleged thought crimes of racism and anti-semitism. In reality, of course, Dawson is the furthest thing from a racist, having devoted much of his life to advocating things like police reform and the abolition of the war on drugs. But he has also been staunchly antiwar, and that has helped to earn him some vocal enemies. Scott and Dawson go on to discuss the Marxist roots of Black Lives Matter, the history of slavery, the economies of Africa and skateboarding as a force for social good.

Z (military symbol)

Article Talk

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

"Z symbol" redirects here. For other uses, see Z (disambiguation).
"Zwastika" redirects here. For swastika, see Swastika (disambiguation).

The Latin-script letter Z (Russian: зет, tr. zet; IPA: [zɐt]) is one of several symbols (including "V" and "O") painted on military vehicles of the Russian Armed Forces involved in the 2022 Russian invasion of Ukraine. It is speculated that the Z helps task forces distinguish themselves from other forces.<sup>[1][2]</sup> Subsequently, it also became a militarist symbol used in Russian propaganda<sup>[9]</sup> and by Russian civilians as a sign of support for the invasion. Outside Russia, the symbol has been banned from public display in various countries. The "Z" symbol has been pejoratively called a zwastika or zwastika, in reference to the Nazi swastika,<sup>[15]</sup> or pejoratively in Russian and Ukrainian as "ziga" (Russian: зига) in reference to Sieg Heil, by opponents of the war.<sup>[16]</sup> Some Ukrainian officials and commenters on the Internet also started referring to Russia as Ruzzia or Ruzzia (Russian: Рozzия or PоZZия; Ukrainian: Pоzzia or PоZZia).<sup>[24]</sup>

President Putin's genius is his judo ability to conserve his own energy and let the opponents flail, using up their energy, while he gains position. Currently, President Putin has a higher approval rating in America than the American President, particularly with women. President Putin has an alluring combination of strength with gentleness. His sensuous image projects his love for life, the embodiment of grace while facing adversity. It is evident that he loves his country, his people and his job. Although his job may seem like in the words of writer, Elizabeth Gilbert on genius, " trying to swallow the sun." This is a whole lot to deal with for one mere mortal... President Putin's obvious reverence for women, children and animals, and his ability with sports is intoxicating to American women. Especially since the bloated, American President is so negative, denigrating and dismissive of anyone but himself as he stumbles even playing golf (which is not a real sport anyway but a past time, sorry golfers).

President Putin has taken his nation and his people towards new horizons of developing prosperity with education, science, technology and innovation. While in America, news of more jobs lost, punishing tariffs and ignorant, environmental policies abound. Sanctions mount and scandals alight the media.

So, I am not watching our country with naive or star spangled eyes or any other nation. I will keep pushing for the America that we could be. My best America embodies compassion; diversity, creativity, future oriented innovation and positive approaches to diplomacy. Further, America needs no more xenophobic rhetoric. When the anti-Russia, anti-Putin propaganda

President Putin scares the power elite in America because he is a compassionate, caring, visionary leader. President Putin has higher approval ratings in America than the American President. President Putin is beloved by Russia and he not going anywhere. Instead of being ensnared in the recent political intrigues (and America is trying hard to set that trap). President Putin is keeping a calm focus on his own country's development and future, without America.

To President Putin, I say keep your eyes to the beautiful future and maybe, just maybe America will come to see Russia as I do, with eyes of love. To all my Russian friends, happy holiday and Happy New Year.

In 2022, Simonyan was sanctioned by the European Union as "a central figure of the Russian Government propaganda" responsible for "actions and policies which undermine the territorial integrity, sovereignty and independence of Ukraine".<sup>[5]</sup> In January 2023, Ukraine imposed sanctions on Margarita for her support of 2022 Russian invasion of Ukraine.<sup>[6]</sup>

Especially after the Ukrainian "Orange revolution", which Moscow perceived as a western-instigated threat to Russia's influence in the post-Soviet space, Moscow felt that it needed to step up its outreach to international audiences. That seemed to be a perfect time to return to Lesin's idea of an international TV channel. Lesin, who was then an advisor to Putin, teamed up with the Kremlin Press Secretary Alexey Gromov, and developed the idea of the Russia Today TV channel.

The launch of Russia Today was announced at the beginning of June 2005. A 25-year-old uber-loyal Russian journalist, Margarita Simonyan, was appointed the editor-in-chief, possibly on Gromov's personal recommendation – they closely worked together when she was a reporter in the Kremlin pool.

MIA Rossiya Segodnya (Russian: Россия сегодня, lit. 'Russia Today'; Russian pronunciation: [rʲɔ sʲɪjə ɐt vodnʲə]) is a media group owned and operated by the Russian government, created on the basis of RIA Novosti.<sup>[1][2][3][4]</sup> The group owns and operates Sputnik, RIA Novosti, inoSMI and several other entities. The head of the organisation is Dmitry Kiselyov.<sup>[5]</sup> Margarita Simonyan is the chief editor.

RIA Novosti was Russia's international news agency until 9 December 2013 when it became known as Rossiya Segodnya.<sup>[1][2][3]</sup> Dmitry Kiselyov, an anchorman of the Russia-1 channel was appointed to be the first president of the reorganized agency.<sup>[1][2]</sup> He soon announced that Margarita Simonyan was to be editor-in-chief. Simonyan told The New York Times in 2017 that she chose Sputnik as the new name "because I thought that's the only Russian word that has a positive connotation, and the whole world knows it."<sup>[1]</sup>

Sputnik was launched on 10 November 2014 by Rossiya Segodnya, which is itself funded through RT, owned and operated by the Russian government, and was created via an Executive Order of the President of Russia on 9 December 2013.<sup>[1][2]</sup> As well as the RIA Novosti news agency, Sputnik's origins can be traced to 1929 when Radio Moscow was launched as the official international broadcasting station of Soviet Union airing across the country, Eastern Europe and Cuba until it was replaced by Voice of Russia in 1993 along with the foreign language services of RIA Novosti.<sup>[1][2]</sup> RT UK was launched a fortnight earlier. According to its editor-in-chief Dmitry Kiselyov, Sputnik was intended to reach a worldwide audience "bored of aggressive propaganda promoting a unipolar world and who want a different perspective".<sup>[1][2][3]</sup> The station claims it "fills the void".<sup>[1][2]</sup> However, President Vladimir Putin, while visiting the Moscow base of the RT television network in 2013, said the objective behind both the then forthcoming Sputnik agency and RT was to "break the monopoly of the Anglo-Saxon global information streams."<sup>[2]</sup>

Ionov used his control over U.S. Political Group 1 leaders to foster discord within the United States, to spread pro-Russian propaganda under the guise of a domestic political organization, and to interfere in local elections. For example, in January 2016, Ionov guaranteed financing for—and ultimately funded—a four-city protest tour undertaken by U.S. Political Group 1 in support of a "Petition on Crime of Genocide against African People in the United States" which it had previously submitted to the United Nations at Ionov's direction. Later, in 2017 and 2019, Ionov monitored and supported the St. Petersburg, Florida, political campaigns of UIC-3 and UIC-4. In 2019, before the primary election, Ionov wrote to a Russian official that he had been "consulting every week" on the campaign. After UIC-4 advanced to the general election, FSB Officer 1 wrote to Ionov that "our election campaign is kind of unique," and asked, "are we the first in history?" Ionov later sent FSB Officer 1 additional details about the election, referring to UIC-4 as the candidate "whom we supervise."

Omali Yeshitela at his press conference hours after his home was raided by the FBI on July 29.

But the federal indictment Omali referenced in his press conference does contain connections to his groups. It charges Russian national Aleksandr Viktorovich Ionov with working with Russian intelligence agencies to recruit "members of U.S. political groups as foreign agents of Russia within the United States."

While not naming these political groups, the indictment describes a working relationship between Ionov and an organization it calls "U.S. Political Group 1." In August 2016, Ionov is said to have directed U.S. Political Group 1 to publish a statement of support of Russia's Olympic team as it faced a doping scandal. The indictment includes the title of that statement but redacts the name of the group: "Imperialists ban Russia from 2016 Olympic Games! U.S. Political Group 1 says 'let Russia play!'"

Today, you can still find that statement on the website of the Burning Spear, the official newspaper of the African People's Socialist Party. It was published under the headline, "Imperialists ban Russia from 2016 Olympic Games! APSP says 'let Russia play!'"

If U.S. Political Group 1 is indeed the African People's Socialist Party, it also is accused of receiving cash from Russia, according to the indictment, in the form of a couple of payments in 2016 totaling about $7,000.

Other connections to Ionov are more overt. In March, as Russia launched its war on Ukraine, Ionov joined two web conferences hosted by Omali Yeshitela, one called "Live With Russia" and the other "Negating Colonial Lies About Russia."

Russian Diplomats tried to bring a Biden accuser to the U.N. | Semafor

Russia's delegation to the United Nations hoped to embarrass President Joe Biden by resurfacing a controversial figure from the 2020 presidential campaign.

"Your name was too toxic for them and they did everything they could to block you from participating," Polyanskiy told Reade of her exclusion.

Reade told Semafor that a Russian U.N. diplomat reached out to her in recent weeks, saying they had seen her criticisms of the war in Ukraine on social media and her YouTube channel. Reade said she is a "longtime anti-imperialist," and that her comments stem from her frustration with "Russophobia" and the military industrial complex.

"They deflect it as Russian disinformation, which is not true," she said of Western diplomats at the United Nations. "I don't really understand the deflection or the resistance to doing simply accounting and oversight."

Ukraine: Invasion fears are hype and hysteria - Russian diplomat

Fears of a Russian invasion of Ukraine are "hype and hysteria" and the presence of Russian troops near the border with Ukraine is part of normal processes, Russia's deputy ambassador to the UN has told the BBC.

Dmitry Polyanskiy told the BBC's Yalda Hakim that if Russia was not attacked or provoked, it would not initiate a war.

He said Russia respected Ukraine's sovereignty, but did not accept Ukrainian intentions to join Nato because the alliance's infrastructure on Russian borders would put Russia's security "at threat".

Genocide of Ukrainians...

And.... ghettos for surfers 🏄

Alexander Dugin | Z

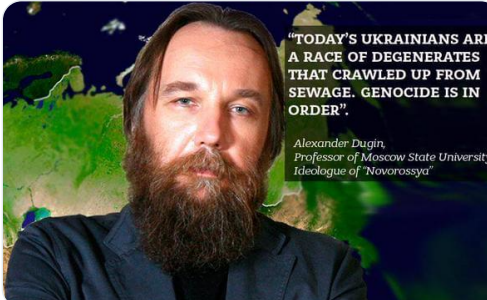

An absolute war

For the first time in history, Russia is fighting an absolute war. All previous wars were relative and prototypes, prefigurations of this one, which is the main one. Only this war is the final one, the last and irreversibly significant. It is clear that we do not yet understand it. What is happening is beyond the comprehension of even those involved in it, even those who started it. For the first time at the other end is absolute evil - not partial, not relative; it is not even the West, much less the ephemeral transient entity of so called "Ukraine", however hellish it may seem: it is something much deeper. This is humanity's last war. Only Russia, with a few others, has decisively taken the side of Truth, but has not understood how. It is for this historical moment that we, Russians, have been created. Regardless of how it ends, preparations for the Last Judgement are in full swing. The watershed is cutting across the planet: on this side or on the other. Humanity is torn apart. History is a movement from one to two. In the beginning there was only one Adam. In the end there are two: Adam and his black double.

Так же и евразец может угадать сущность других по нюансам, по оговоркам, по внешнему виду, вот человек повернул кошку назад, одел шаровые атланты, пошел. Что это значит? Он находится в состоянии одержимости духом атлантизма. Он служит Левшаффу. Налегает риз, самодовольно изводит и нас, расслабляется - всё понятно. Это Левшафф. Конечно, это еще не полное погружение в Левшаффа, но это уже, в принципе, объект для гротескного разбирательства. Когда нас будет больше, мы, безусловно, таким персонажам проходить просто так по нашим улицам не разрешим. Они должны будут собираться в особых местах, как в гетто для больных, и там уже спускать штаны свои, изображать MTV-шную рожи и с этими чуждыми досками на колесах прыгать. Это будет атлантистское, левшаффовское гетто для роллеров, райдеров или скейбордистов. Самые страшные гетто будут созданы для серфингистов, - вот это самое наглое, самое антиевразийское явление. Нет ничего более отвратительного, чем катание с белоулыбой улыбай на этой омерзительной доске. Одним словом, атлантизм - это наш абсолютный враг. Больше здесь сказать нечего. Самое главное сказано. Кто не понял, ему уже ничего не поможет. Ничего.

In the same way, a Eurasian can guess the essence of others by nuances, by reservations, by appearance, here the man turned his cap back, put on wide trousers, and went. What does it mean? He is in a state of possession by the spirit of Atlanticism. He serves Leviathan. He sings rap, smugly picks his nose, relaxes - everything is clear. This is Leviathan. Of course, this is not yet a complete immersion in Leviathan, but this is, in principle, an object for close examination. When there will be more of us, we will certainly not allow such characters to pass through our streets just like that. They will have to gather in special places, like in the ghettos for the sick, and there they will already lower their pants, make an MTV face and jump with these monstrous boards on wheels. It will be an Atlantist, Leviathan ghetto for rollerbladers, rappers or skateboarders. The most terrible ghettos will be created for surfers - this is the most arrogant, most anti-Eurasian phenomenon. There is nothing more disgusting than riding with a white-toothed smile on this disgusting board. In a word, Atlanticism is our absolute enemy. There is nothing more to say here. The most important thing has been said. Whoever does not understand, nothing will help him. Nothing.

Why the former weapons inspector stopped getting up Saddam's nose and picked a fight with Bush

<https://content.time.com/time/nation/article/0,8599,351165,00.html>

Scott Ritter: Economic sanctions won't work, we know that. Iraq has turned economic sanctions around and used it against the United Nations and United States. I think you are coming to the obvious point, but that is a decision that the national security team has to make, not Scott Ritter.

It was not Senator Biden calling for war, it was Scott Ritter.

By 2002 though Scott Ritter was taking a guided tour of Iraq paid for by Saddam's regime and delivering a speech to the Iraqi Parliament where he declared that Iraq had no WMD's and was not a threat to anyone.

What happened specifically to Ritter after 1998? Between 1998 and 1990? Scott Ritter had continued his work this time in Russia, on disarmament. While still married to his first wife, Ritter began an affair with 19 year old Marina Khatiasvili, his Russian supplied translator and escort.

Under the USSR anyone working with foreigners, especially foreigners tied to foreign diplomatic or military service, without exception reported to the KGB. Ritter himself penned numerous reports at the time stating that the Soviets were using the "young girls" to sexually compromise the inspectors. Later Ritter would deny writing these reports. Finally Scott Ritter would divorce his wife and marry the young girl who had been provided for him and the rest of his career would get uglier and uglier.

The critic of Saddam's regime had by 2005 turned into not merely a critic of the Iraq War or the US presence, but an outright cheerleader for the Sunni Ex-Baathist terrorists, who were themselves closely tied to Russia.

Are you being investigated for espionage?

I've been called a spy of Israel since 1996, and since I made my documentary film in 2000 the FBI has investigated me as an agent of Iraq. The FBI has also opened up an investigation into my wife calling her a KGB spy. So there is this form of harassment taking place.

Did you write a report, at the time you were doing inspections in Votkinsk in the Soviet Union in 1988 that said the group your wife worked for was full of spies?

No. I indicated that given past models of Soviet penetration techniques that these young girls, of which my wife was one, who were brought in by the Soviets to carry out translation services had been used in the past to attempt sexual compromise. I subsequently wrote a series of reports that said this did not appear to be the case in Votkinsk. In fact, because of the human intelligence work I did in the Soviet Union I was able to ascertain that the girls were actually dissatisfied with the Soviets. They showed a tendency to speak out against the KGB to the U.S. inspectors.

Iraq? Yes, Scott Ritter is such a big expert on the topic, yet there he is, repeating Saddam's propaganda. Honest mistake, I'm sure. #ProWarRally

- The Persecution of Feyli Kurds under Saddam Hussein [1] also known as the Feyli Kurdish genocide, was a systematic persecution of Feylis by Saddam Hussein between 1970 and 2003. The persecution campaigns led to the expulsion, flight and effective exile of the Feyli Kurds from their ancestral lands in Iraq. The persecution began when a large number of Feyli Kurds were exposed to a big campaign by the regime that began by the dissolved PCR issuance for 666 decision, which deprived Feyli Kurds of Iraqi nationality and considered them as Iranians. The systematic executions started in Baghdad and Khanaqin in 1979 and later spread to other Iraqi and Kurdish areas. [10] It is estimated that around 25,000 Feyli Kurds died due to captivity and torture. [11] (citation needed)
- Halabja poison gas attack: The Halabja poison gas attack occurred in the period 15–19 March 1988 during the Iran–Iraq War when chemical weapons were used by the Iraqi government forces and thousands of civilians in the Iraqi Kurdish town of Halabja were killed. [12]
- Anfal campaign: In 1988, the Hussein regime began a campaign of extermination against the Kurdish people living in Northern Iraq. This is known as the Anfal campaign. A team of Human Rights Watch investigators determined, after analyzing eighteen tons of captured Iraqi documents, testing soil samples and carrying out interviews with more than 300 witnesses, that the attacks on the Kurdish people were characterized by gross violations of human rights, including mass executions and disappearances of many tens of thousands of noncombatants, widespread use of chemical weapons including Sarin, mustard gas and nerve agents that killed thousands, the arbitrary imprisoning of tens of thousands of women, children, and elderly people for months in conditions of extreme deprivation, forced displacement of hundreds of thousands of villagers after the demolition of their homes, and the wholesale destruction of nearly two thousand villages along with their schools, mosques, farms and power stations. [13]
- 50,000 to 70,000 Shi'a were arrested in the 1980s and never heard from again [1]
- 8,000 Kurds from the Barzani clan were disappeared and likely killed [1]
- 50,000 dissidents, party members, Kurds, and other minorities were disappeared and presumed killed in the 1980s through 1990s [1]

Number of victims [ edit ]

In November 2004, Human Rights Watch estimated 250,000 to 290,000 Iraqis were killed or disappeared by the regime of Saddam Hussein including [1]

The estimate of 290,000 "disappeared" and presumed killed includes the following: more than 100,000 Kurds killed during the 1987-88 Anfal campaign and lead-up to it; between 50,000 and 70,000 Shi'a arrested in the 1980s and held indefinitely without charge, who remain unaccounted for today; an estimated 8,000 males of the Barzani clan removed from settlement camps in Iraq Kurdistan in 1988; 10,000 or more males separated from Feyli Kurdish families deported to Iran in the 1980s; an estimated 50,000 opposition activists, including Communists and other leftists, Kurds and other minorities, and out-of-favor Ba'athists, arrested and "disappeared" in the 1980s and 1990s; some 30,000 Iraqi Shi'a men rounded up after the abortive March 1991 uprising and not heard from since; hundreds of Shi'a clerics and their students arrested and "disappeared" after 1991; several thousand marsh Arabs who disappeared after being taken into custody during military operations in the southern marshlands; and those executed in detention in some years several thousand in so-called "prison cleansing" campaigns

It featured Scott Ritter, a former U.S. Marine Corps Intelligence Officer and outspoken columnist and commentator elaborating on some of the points surrounding the Russian intervention in Ukraine that have gone under-mentioned in standard media narratives.

In this interview (complete transcript available below) Ritter spoke of the role of Nazis in Russia's move, the fact that the Russians will soon achieve a victory, the role of Zelensky in his public demands, and the role sanctions ultimately played in Vladimir Putin's favor.

Scott Ritter is a U.S. Marine Corps Intelligence officer, former UN Chief Weapons Inspector from 1991-1998, and is currently engaged as a commentator and columnist on Huffington Post, conservative and the American Conservative.

Ukraine—a wretched, perpetual black hole of kleptocracy and a clear liability despite its short-term use as an anti-Russia asset—isn't the US' long-term investment.

For those who have bought into the fiction of a noble Ukrainian resistance, you do not understand modern war. The Ukrainian Military will be annihilated in short order; any Ukrainian militia dumb enough to try to pull a trigger will not live to see another day. This is reality.

Putin thought Ukrainians would roll over and not fight. Instead, Russian forces have met their match with brave and stiff Ukrainian resistance.

When Belorussian authorities pulled Roman Protasevich, a blogger who had served a combat tour in the neo-Nazi Azov battalion before working for Radio Free Europe's Belarus channel out of Prague, off an airplane in May, 2021, on charges of inciting a political opposition (roughly the equivalent of sedition), the world went crazy, accusing Belarussian President Alexander Lukashenko of trampling on free speech. Protasevich is alive and well, living under house arrest while awaiting trial.

When reports emerged that Gonzo Lira, a Chilean social media "influencer" who resided in Kharkov, Ukraine, and who published online content critical of the Ukrainian government, was kidnapped, tortured, and murdered by the Kraken Unit, part of the Azov battalion affiliated with the Ukrainian Security Service (SBU), the West is silent.

Free speech isn't a one way street. To remain silent in the murder of Gonzo Lira is to be complicit in his death, and the deaths of all journalists who pursue the truth, even if it runs counter to the mainstream narrative. Critical thinking should not be a death sentence. Unfortunately for Gonzo Lira, it seems it was.

What happened to "physical removal of communists" 🤔 may say innumerable things and promote almost any idea under the sun, but naturally no one is permitted to advocate ideas contrary to the very purpose of the covenant of preserving and protecting private property, such as democracy and communism. There can be no tolerance toward democrats and communists in a libertarian social order. They will have to be physically separated and expelled from society. Likewise, in a covenant founded for the purpose of protecting family and kin, there can be no tolerance toward those habitually promoting lifestyles incompatible with this goal. They—the advocates of alternative, non-family and kin-centered lifestyles such as, for instance, individual hedonism, parasitism, nature–environment worship, homosexuality, or communism—will have to be physically removed from society, too, if one is to maintain a libertarian order.

In 2018, Kauffman joined the board of directors of the non-profit, the Free State Project.<sup>[18][19]</sup> Kauffman believes that the Free State Project is the most effective way for libertarians to achieve "liberty in our lifetime" and has debated this assertion in a public forum.<sup>[20]</sup> Kauffman is also a member of the Libertarian Party's Mises Caucus.<sup>[21]</sup>

In April 2021, Kauffman was given access to Libertarian Party of New Hampshire (LPNH)'s official Twitter account soon after the state party was taken over by the Mises Caucus.<sup>[22]</sup> Kauffman later made tweets on the LPNH account that received controversy,<sup>[23]</sup> such as calling for child labor to be legalized, saying "All Republicans do about weakness is whine. Libertarians have solutions; repeal the Civil Rights Act [of 1964], and re-opening Glines" "so that Anthony Fauci and every governor that locked their states down can be sent there, never again to be allowed inside of the United States"<sup>[24]</sup> The pro-child labor tweet specifically received pushback from 2012 and 2016 Libertarian presidential nominee Gary Johnson, saying "This isn't what libertarianism means to millions of Americans"<sup>[25]</sup> The tweets later partly resulted in the resignation of the national Libertarian Party leader Joe Bishop Handelman.<sup>[22][26]</sup> Kauffman defended his actions by saying the tweets were good for libertarians, and accused national party leadership of being "wokeneoliberal globalists".<sup>[27]</sup>

As of June 2022, Kauffman is running for United States Senate as a Libertarian in New Hampshire. In response to a question as to why he was running for office, he replied, "I'm the only one running that will actually make the government smaller".<sup>[28]</sup> Among his key campaign issues are "abolishing the Federal Reserve, the Internal Revenue Service and child labor laws"<sup>[29]</sup> "making sure the lockdowns and restrictions can't happen again" and committing "to end the drug war".<sup>[28]</sup> In an NPR interview, Kauffman stated that he wanted "less democracy," elaborating that he does not want people in California and New York voting on his life in New Hampshire and that it is permissible to "let states disagree" under the U.S. system of federalism.<sup>[30]</sup>

While some polls initially indicated that Kauffman's run would have a vote splitting effect between Maggie Hassan and Don Bolduc,<sup>[31]</sup> Hassan beat Bolduc by nearly 10% with Kauffman receiving 2% of the total vote.<sup>[32]</sup>

The fact that through due diligence Mr. Ritter's legal record was not discovered before this point is a failure, but right now our priority is to save this rally so its more important, larger purpose can be achieved. (7/13)

"Small actions aren't making a dent in the military-industrial march to a nuclear WW3," Angela McArdle wrote in the email containing the poster. "We need to go bigger and bolder. Much bigger and bolder. That's why we're organizing buses from across the Eastern US to DC and working to make this the biggest anti-war protest since the Iraq War." She then concluded, "Your message of dialogue and collaboration to pull back from the brink of annihilation is something the world needs to hear."

Or not.

Shortly after I was announced as a speaker, I received an email from Angela McArdle. "We're starting to get questions from conservative publications about the accusations leveled against you," she wrote. "Is there a way you'd like me to respond when I get asked about your past? I can link to your article if that's your preference."

"It's up to you," I replied. "If this makes you uncomfortable, I can stay home. Feel free to link my article if that suits you as well. Or," I observed, "just ignore them."

Angela wrote back. "Neither of us [her and Nick] want you to drop out. I wanted to run it by you before I started shooting off quotes to reporters. I can refer to your article & pull quotes from it."

Ritter was the subject in two law enforcement sting operations in 2001.<sup>[34]</sup> He was charged in June 2001 with trying to set up a meeting with an undercover police officer posing as a 16-year-old girl.<sup>[35][36]</sup> He was charged with a misdemeanor crime of "attempted endangerment of the welfare of a child". The charge was dismissed and the record was sealed after he completed six months of pre-trial probation.<sup>[36][6]</sup> After this information was made public in early 2003, Ritter said that the timing of the leak was politically motivated in order to silence his opposition to the Bush administration's push toward war with Iraq.<sup>[35][36][37]</sup>

Ritter was arrested again in November 2009<sup>[38]</sup> over communications with a police decoy he met on an Internet chat site. Police said that he exposed himself, via a web camera, after the officer repeatedly identified himself as a 15-year-old girl.<sup>[2]</sup> Ritter said in his

In his desperation to delegitimize the Ukrainian leader, he is resuscitating the long-discarded notion that Hitler was partially Jewish.

RT spoke to Lew Rockwell, editor of LewRockwell.com, to discuss the ramifications of increasing the debt ceiling.

The American media and government's unstated principle is that 'anybody killed by the US deserves it,' and the best thing they say is that they were in the wrong place at the wrong time, says political commentator Lew Rockwell, editor of LewRockwell.com

Human Rights Watch issued a report on Tuesday accusing the US of failing to take precautions to avoid civilian casualties in the airstrike on March 16 in Syria.

At least 38 people were killed in a US air raid that hit a mosque, according to data obtained by Human Rights Watch.

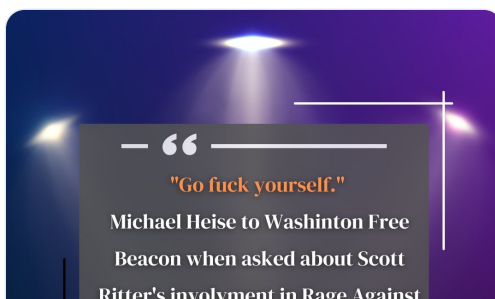

The strike took place as worshippers were gathering for evening prayers. However, The Pentagon denied its planes had hit the mosque saying it targeted a building 15 meters away from where Al-Qaeda members were reportedly meeting.

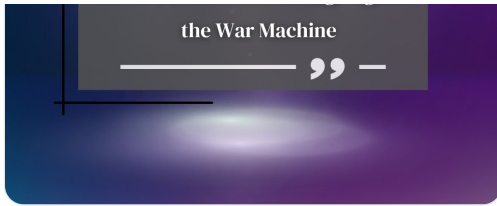

RT: Will anyone take responsibility for the casualties, do you think?

Dear Mrs. Zelenska,

I have just read a piece on BBC.com apparently taken from an interview you have already recorded for a program called 'Sunday with Laura Kuennsberg' which is to be broadcast on the BBC today, September 4th. BBC.com quotes you as saying that "If support for Ukraine is strong, the crisis will be shorter." Hmmmm? I guess that might depend on what you mean by "support for Ukraine"? If by "support for Ukraine" you mean the West continuing to supply arms to the Kiev government's armies, I fear you may be tragically mistaken. Throwing fuel, in the form of armaments, into a fire fight, has never worked to shorten a war in the past, and it won't work now, particularly because, in this case, most of the fuel is (a) being thrown into the fire from Washington DC, which is at a relatively safe distance from the conflagration, and (b) because the 'fuel throwers' have already declared an interest in the war going on for as long as possible. I fear that we, and by we I mean people like you and me who actually want peace in Ukraine, who don't want the outcome to be that you have to fight to the last Ukrainian life, and possibly even, if the worst comes to the worst, to the last human life. If we, instead, wish to achieve a different outcome we may have to seek a different route and that route may lie in your husband's those factions persuaded your husband to diametrically change course ignoring the peoples mandate. Sadly, your old man agreed to those totalitarian, anti-democratic dismissals of the will of the Ukrainian people, and the forces of extreme nationalism that had lurked, malevolent, in the shadows, have, since then, ruled the Ukraine. They have, also since then, crossed any number of red lines that had been set out quite clearly over a number of years by your neighbors the Russian Federation and in consequence they, the extreme nationalists, have set your country on the path to this disastrous war.

I won't go on.

If I'm wrong, please help me to understand how?

Might it not be better to demand the implementation of your husband's election promises and put an end to this deadly war?

Yes, I mean the platform upon which he so laudably ran for the office of President of Ukraine, the platform upon which he won his historic landslide victory in the democratic election in 2019. He stood on the election platform of the following promises.

1. To end the civil war in the East and bring peace to the Donbas and partial autonomy to Donetsk and Luhansk.
2. And to ratify and implement the rest of the body of the Minsk 2 agreements.

One can only assume that your husband's electoral policies didn't sit well with certain political factions in Kiev and that those factions persuaded your husband to diametrically change course ignoring the peoples mandate. Sadly, your old man agreed to those totalitarian, anti-democratic dismissals of the will of the Ukrainian people, and the forces of extreme nationalism that had lurked, malevolent, in the shadows, have, since then, ruled the Ukraine. They have, also since then, crossed any number of red lines that had been set out quite clearly over a number of years by your neighbors the Russian Federation and in consequence they, the extreme nationalists, have set your country on the path to this disastrous war.

I won't go on.

If I'm wrong, please help me to understand how?

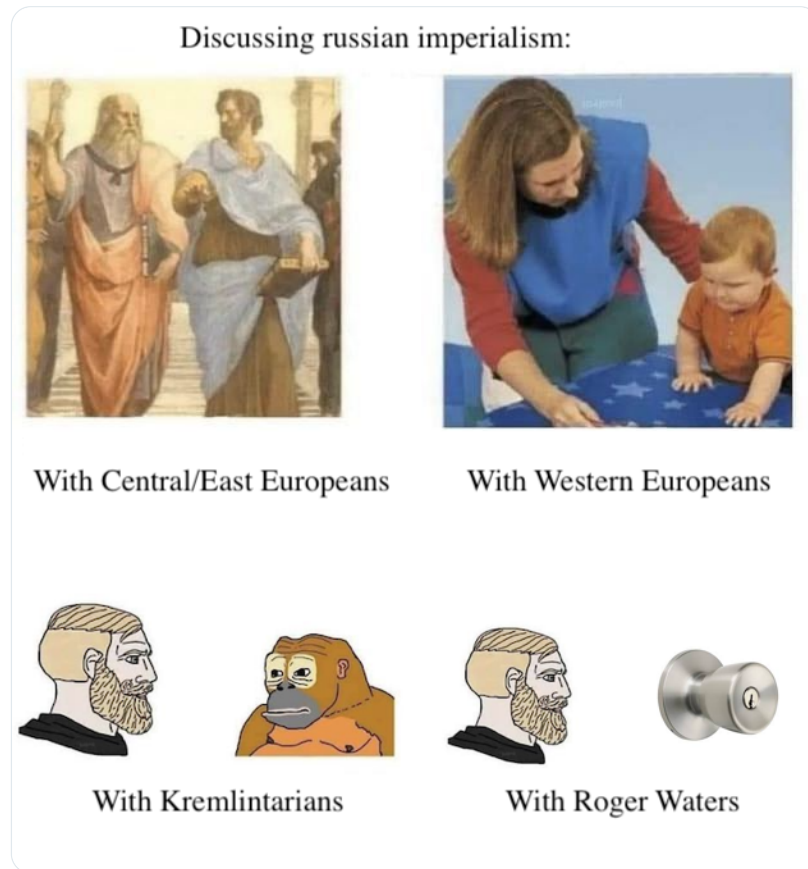

If I'm not wrong, please help me in my honest endeavors to persuade our leaders to stop the slaughter, the slaughter which serves only the interests of the ruling classes and extreme nationalists both here in the West, and in your beautiful country, at the expense of the rest of us ordinary people both here in the West, and in the Ukraine, and in fact ordinary people everywhere all over the world.

Might it not be better to demand the implementation of your husband's election promises and put an end to this deadly war?

A Personal Message From Roger Waters: Join Me in Supporting Antiwar.com

by Roger Waters / October 25, 2022

Today, we are standing on the edge of a precipice, staring into the abyss. The end of all life on earth is a very real possibility. The reins of power have been purchased by the oligarchs and ideologues and they are hell bent on the end of times. Make no mistake. This is not a drill.

Some say the Cuban Missile Crisis of 1962 is the closest we have come to a nuclear catastrophe, but at least then, JFK and Nikita Khrushchev were in communication. In our current crisis, our leaders are not even talking to each other. We human beings must communicate with each other if we are to survive. We here in the West are drowning in a sea of pro-war propaganda and presumably the Russians are too. How are we the people to make sense in this maelstrom of misinformation? ### Right and Left To Join in D.C. Protest: 'Not One More Penny for War in Ukraine'

February 19, New Anti-Interventionist Coalition To March to White House From Lincoln Memorial.

by John V. Walsh / January 23, 2023

On February 19, Washington, DC, will witness a protest against the war in Ukraine that marks a sharp departure from past demonstrations. The lead demand is simple and direct, "Not One More Penny for war in Ukraine." It is a demand that emphasizes what we in the US can do to end the war, not what others can do. After all, the only government we have the power to influence is our own.

Make plans now to get to Washington on February 19. Lend your presence to this potent new coalition of forces. The demonstration will gather at the Lincoln Memorial and then march to the White House. Watch for more details, and sign up for updates here in the coming weeks.

Let's do this. Time is running out as the threat of nuclear war grows with each day and each new escalation in Ukraine. A broad coalition can end it. Enough of the forever wars!

Feb. 19: We Need a Huge Rage Against the War Machine
by Rick Sterling / February 16, 2023

We urgently need to spark a mass mobilization antiwar movement in North America. There have been good antiwar demonstrations in recent months, but they have been very limited. We need to rapidly expand tenfold.

The Feb. 19 Rage Against the War Machine initiative, which is organized by a diverse group of antiwar forces, could do just that. The demands and overall speaker list are very good.

Man in the High Castle

the great horror is that this heinous deed was committed against Japan, a civilization as far removed from our own as the streets of New York are from the savannas. It's at times like these that I tend to think the wrong side won the war in the Pacific. If we all woke up one day living in some alternate history, as in Phillip K. Dick's The Man in the High Castle, our cultural malaise would disappear overnight. Instead of listening to the latest loutish rap of Eminem, American teenagers would be appreciating the subtle beauty of the Japanese economy. If contemporary Japan is any clue, the unemployment rate would be cut by 95 percent, and the stock market would skyrocket. Certainly everyone's manners would improve. All in all, life would be far more civilized, imbued with a gentility that would make York Post an impossibility.

Man in the High Castle (TV series)
Man in the High Castle (1962), by Philip K. Dick, is an alternative history novel wherein the Axis powers won World War II. The story occurs in 1962, three years after the end of the war in 1947, and depicts the political intrigues between Imperial Japan and Nazi Germany as they rule the partitioned United States.
The Grasshopper Lies Heavy is a novel within-the-novel which is an alternative history of the war in which Hitler defeated the Axis.
Fictional inspirations include the alternative history of the American Civil War, Wing the Jubilee by Wood Moore, and the 13th Day, a Chinese book of devastation that features in the story and the title character. The Man in the High Castle won the Hugo Award for Best Novel in 1963, and was later selected for Amazon Prime Video as The Man in the High Castle in 2015.

William J. Astore: Why I'm Pro-Russia

It was bound to happen

by William Astore / February 13, 2023

Reprinted from Bracing Views with the author's permission.

Comrades, it has finally happened: I've been accused of being pro-Russia.

I was accused because I advocate for diplomacy and a negotiated settlement to the Russia-Ukraine War. Generally, I'm pro-peace and anti-war, but that's a bad thing to be in the Russia-Ukraine conflict.

Vladimir Putin a gangster... That may have been unfair." He explains that he's become a keen listener to the Duran, a podcast spin-off from a website that has published blogs linked to the anti-Nato hacking group Ghostwriter, and uses the Russian Empire's two-headed eagle as a logo. After hearing their take on Russia, Waters now has more respect for Putin. "It may be that he's leading his country to the benefit of all of the people of Russia."

All of the people of Russia? Almost 200,000 of them who were sent to fight in Ukraine have died in the past year. Wouldn't it be more to those people's benefit if they were alive? "You can't really have this conversation at all until you go back to 2004, and until you read everything that [Nato-critical US political scientist John] Mearsheimer has written..." Waters begins to give me a history lesson.

"The Ukraine" – he's punctilious about that "The" – "is a deeply divided country. In fact, it's not really a country at all, it's only been there since Khrushchev, 1956. So it's a patchy sort of vague experiment." How long does a country have to exist, for him to accept it as a country?

No. They aren't. The Ukraine war is a big boon for the military industrial complex and big investment firms like BlackRock.

We are demanding the U.S. to lead peace negotiations and to stop escalating the war in Ukraine before it's too late.

get realized this fact. They argue this way: "It is a very deplorable fact that the peoples of Europe are fighting one another, that they have wrecked their glorious civilization and that they are consequently doomed to starvation and misery. It is no less deplorable that similar things happen in Asia. Unfortunately we cannot save them from disaster. They themselves have to learn that peaceful cooperation would be more beneficial to them than war and mutual extermination. We cannot police the whole world. All we can do is to look out for ourselves and to preserve the Western Hemisphere's independence. We will keep neutral, will not interfere with other continents' affairs and thus preserve our American way of life."

But it is not without concern for America what happens in the rest of the world. The establishment of two big totalitarian empires, one on the other side of the Atlantic, one on the other side of the Pacific, would have been a tremendous menace to America's political independence. The German nationalists had always emphasized that the last goal of their ambitions was the conquest of a large colonial domain on the American continent. The present writer is not familiar with the Japanese language and does not know whether Japanese economists and publicists were equally frank in their printed utterances. But he knows from conversations with many Japanese professors and students that they considered the Americans and not the Chinese, their main protectionism and still more surely possible conflicts. The Second World War was not caused by Nationalism. The failure of all other nations to erect in time a barrier against a possible aggression was no less instrumental in bringing about the disaster than the plans of the Nazis and the other Axis powers. If the Nazis had expected to encounter on the first day of hostilities a united and adequately armed force of all those nations which have come united in fighting them, they would never have ventured an assault. But collective security is unavailable among nations bitterly fighting one another in the economic sphere. Economic nationalism has divided the peace-loving nations. If the United Nations do not succeed in breaking away economic nationalism, peace conditions will not differ from those prevailing in the years between the two World Wars. Then a third and much more dreadful war is unavoidable.

Every nation has to choose. The United States too. The alternative is only among the peace-loving nations or return to the chaos out of which new conflict will originate. But unity is incompatible with protection. Every day experience shows that the great neighbor policy among the American republics comes into collision with economic nationalism. How should Latin America and the European democracies enter into a close political collaboration with the United States if their citizens suffer from American foreign trade policies?

rise, even among the Russian people there are some who do not share this attitude. It is only to be noted that they have not been able to prevail over their competitors. Ever since Russia was first in a position to influence European politics, it has continually behaved like a robber who lies in wait for an opportunity when he can pounce upon his victim and plunder him of his possessions. At no time did the Russians acknowledge any other limits to the expansion of their empire than those dictated by the force of violence. The position of the Bolsheviks in regard to the problem of the territorial expansion of the empire is not a whit different. They too acknowledge no other rule than that, in the conquest of new territory and indeed must go as far as one dares, with due regard to one's resources. The fortunate circumstance that saved civilization from being destroyed by the Russians was the fact that the nations were strong enough to be able successfully to stand off the onslaught of the hordes of Russian warriors. The experiences of the Russians in the Napoleonic Wars, the Crimean War, and the Turkish campaigns showed them that, in spite of the great number of their soldiers, their army is unable to subvert Europe. The World War merely confirmed this.

II. Russia
The law-abiding citizen by his labor serves both himself and his fellow man and thereby integrates himself peacefully into the social order. The robber, on the other hand, is intent, not on honest toil, but on the forcible appropriation of the fruits of others' labor. For thousands of years the world had to submit to the rule of military conquerors and feudal lords who simply took for granted that the products of the industry of other men existed for them to consume. The evolution of mankind towards civilization and the strengthening of social bonds required, first of all, overcoming the intellectual and physical influence of the military and feudal castes that seemed to rule the world and the substitution of the ideal of the bourgeois for that of the hereditary lord. The supplanting of the militaristic ideal, which exerts only the warrior and despises honest labor, has not, by any means, even yet been completely achieved. In every nation there are still individuals whose minds are altogether taken up with the ideas and images of the militaristic age. There are nations in which transient aristocratic impulses toward plunder and violence, which one would have presumed to have long since been mastered, still break out and once more gain ascendancy. But, by and large, one can say of the nations of the whole world that today stable central and western Europe and America stand the mortality that neither Spain

The only way I can imagine someone getting the phrase "Donbass Devushka" is by typing "Girl" into Google Translate and then leaving it as is. In Russian, it's utter nonsense.

Therefore, I always thought everyone knew that was an American account. Zero chance of anything else.

Why RFK's Candidacy Matters to the Conservative Cause

by David Stockman / May 15, 2023

Self-evidently, there are any number of things about RFK's policy platform that we don't cotton to very much, and haven't for decades.

Back in the day we were always on opposite sides with respect to aggressive environmental regulation. And, as far as we can tell, he seems to be a pretty conventional liberal on the Welfare State, the Nanny State and we are not even sure of where he stands on the Climate Crisis based assault on fossil fuel and its crucial foundation for modern prosperity and the actual reduction of human poverty and want.

But there are bigger issues now impending that are make or break for the true conservative cause. Indeed, only by shattering the uniparty consensus on these matters is their really any hope for the future of constitutional government, personal liberty and capitalist prosperity in America.

In that regard, there is nothing more stupid, pointless, unnecessary and morally repugnant than Washington's proxy war against Russia in Ukraine. Owing to that folly, Ukrainians in their tens of thousands – civilians and military alike – are being slaughtered and what was once the breadbasket and industrial heartland of eastern Europe is being smashed to smithereens. And all because the Washington uniparty has wildly demonized Vlad Putin for the sin of purportedly bringing the plague of Donald Trump into the the cozy interior of the Washington beltway.

For crying out loud. This is not the wanton invasion of a historically separate and independent nation by an aggressive neighbor. "Ukraine" means borderlands in Russian and for centuries its territories were a vassal and sometimes integral part of the the Russian empire. In fact, today's borders represent little more than the parts and pieces that got assembled into a single state by Lenin, Stalin and Khrushchev for the convenience of their bloody rule.

No, they dont actually. The LP organizers are not the only organizers and they *already did* pull him. The speakers then organized to keep him which threatens the whole event.

I'm talking actual liability. It was a lot of the speakers who stood with him. If you have no speakers, you have no rally. If you have no rally, you are renegeing on what you promised, advertised and fundraised on. This is being done *to* the organizers.

"Small actions aren't making a dent in the military-industrial march to a nuclear WW3," Angela McArdle wrote in the email containing the poster. "We need to go bigger and bolder. Much bigger and bolder. That's why we're organizing buses from across the Eastern US to DC and working to make this the biggest anti-war protest since the Iraq War." She then concluded, "Your message of dialogue and collaboration to pull back from the brink of annihilation is something the world needs to hear."

Or not.

Shortly after I was announced as a speaker, I received an email from Angela McArdle. "We're starting to get questions from conservative publications about the accusations leveled against you," she wrote. "Is there a way you'd like me to respond when I get asked about your past? I can link to your article if that's your preference."

"It's up to you," I replied. "If this makes you uncomfortable, I can stay home. Feel free to link my article if that suits you as well. Or," I observed, "just ignore them."

Angela wrote back. "Neither of us [her and Nick] want you to drop out. I wanted to run it by you before I started shooting off quotes to reporters. I can refer to your article & pull quotes from it."
