Regarding the video with a castration of a Ukrainian POW, comments from the Russian ДШРГ Русич may give some context to the story:

"I have seen up to ten such clips. They're usually published 1-2 years after the events though to make perpetrators more difficult to identify"

Я же говорил что вас будут кастрировать. Уже под десяток таких роликов я созерцал по разрешению операторов, такие видео обычно публикуются спустя 1-2 года после событий, чтобы исполнителя было сложнее вычислить военным надзирающим структурам. Почему данное видео намеренно опубликовано? Ответ очевиден. Дети проститутток, которых ныне принято звать хохлами, очень часто запытывают наших бойцов, причем зачастую бойцов, которые не могут владеть какой-либо информацией, которую было бы целесообразно добывать пытками. Они делают это из садизма, нередко фиксируют преступления на камеру. Так вот, украинские бляды, знайте, что головы ваших сынов уже украшают заборы некоторых домов на освобожденных территориях, их гениталии жрут бродячие собаки, а их сушеные уши уже украшают "дембельские" альбомы русских солдат. Запомните, животные, за каждую каплю русской крови, вам придется заглубнуться собственной кровью, кровью ваших сынов, мужей, отцов и братьев. Добровольно сложите оружие и сдайтесь ближайшим войскам РФ или союзным силам и тогда вы можете быть помиллованы, в противном случае вас ожидает мучительная смерть.

Русич (Rusich) is a Russian Neonazi group fighting in Ukraine. They're reportedly closely associated with the Wagner mercenary company

A Rusich fighter who told he had seen "up to ten such clips" is Evgeny Rasskazov (Topaz). Here you see his post commemorating Hitler's birthday:

"Today is birthday of our comrade who became an example for many of us... his Word and Deed inspires us to beat the Ukro-Bolshevik scum"

"Today is the birthday of our comrade and friend who became an example for many of us... Although he is long gone, his Word and Deed lives in our hearts and inspires us to beat the Ukro-Bolshevik scum for the sake of Great Russia!"

Сегодня день рождения у нашего соратника и друга, который стал примером для многих из нас, несмотря на свой преклонный возраст. Он научил нас любить отчизну и не бояться врага никогда, каким бы сильным враг не был. Он научил нас бороться за исконные земли, которые исторически принадлежат нашему народу. И несмотря на то, что его уже давно нет с нами, его дело и слово живет в наших сердцах и вдохновляет нас бить укро-большевистскую мразь и множить славу великой России!

That's Topaz with Egor Prosvirnin, the editor of the most important Russian nationalist media Sputnik and Pogrom which played an important role in setting the ideology of this war. When Putin made his speech, ppl described it as "Putin repeating Prosvirnin's talking points"

Weirdly enough, Western media make very, very few mentions of the main Russian nationalist media, Sputnik and Pogrom when discussing this war. That leads to either intentional or unintentional massive representation of the Russian internal debates. Which led to what we have now

The cultural influence of Sputnik and Pogrom (Спутник и Погром) in Russia is massive. It's so noticeable that the careful omission of them in almost any debate on this war looks almost intentional. Why would they avoid talking about them so carefully?

Because Prosvirnin was an integral part of the Moscow political and media establishment. Once you bring him and the Sputnik and Pogrom up, too many important people get associated. Here you see Prosvirnin hugging Ksenia Sobchak and political scientist Stanislav Belkovsky

Random photos with other media personalities. Nationalist leader Belov, internet guru Nosik, writer Akunin. Regarding the first two, they might share lots of common agenda, I doubt about the third guy. I post this photos to show associations and a level of his connections

Few key media personalities of the "Russian spring". They are little known in the West but very well - in Russia. Some commenters from Russia may deny it, but they 100% heard about them. Prosvirnin, Olshansky, Kholmogorov. They all stand for the war and escalation of violence

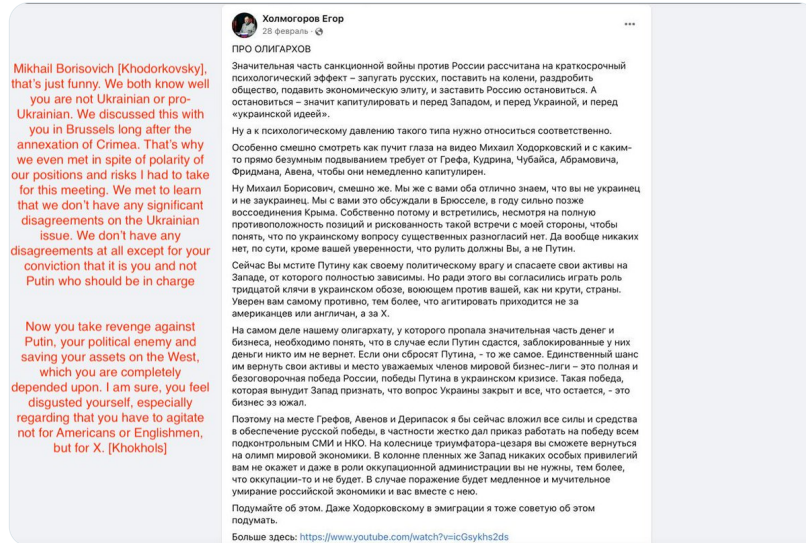

I follow pro-war media personalities with great interest, because they're very talkative. For example, in an interview with a Ukrainian journalist Gordon Khodorkovsky @mbk_center wept on camera very persuasively, begging forgiveness. Forgiveness for what?

Perhaps Russian nationalist Kholmogorov may shed some light

Feb 28, 2022

"... we both know you're not pro-Ukrainian. We discussed this in Brussels long after the Crimea. We have no big disagreements except for your conviction that it's you and not Putin who should be in charge"

Any comments from @mbk_center on that would be helpful. Kholmogorov's testimony seems to fit well to what we know about Khodorkovsky. In his interview to @albbats he openly proclaimed himself a nationalist. But then she deleted this statement from the printed version. Why?

My answer: Moscow media establishment like @albats is systematically whitewashing the figures like @mbk_center or @navalny . She knows that much of what they say isn't gonna be accepted well in the West. So she cuts it out or as I'll show later helps them to avoid responsibility

The theme of Sputnik and Pogrom is avoided so carefully, because once it's brought up, one may wonder in which way Moscow "liberal" opposition is different from Kremlin and how was their positive image constructed. I'll cover it in next material on the Russian liberals. The end

Дорогой Кремль!
Dear Kremlin!

А можно впервые с 1917 года во главе России встанет РУССКИЙ, а не СОВЕТСКИЙ? Спасибо!

May an ethnic Russian and not a Soviet, lead Russia first time since 1917. Thank you!
