Not quite. Mau put his signature under a letter in support of this war. May be hesitantly, but he still did it. Regarding @navalny, I am honestly impressed by how much effort international media invest into whitewashing him and his clique

@Navalny and his circle share the same imperialist agenda as Putin. Except they are far more consistent Russian ethnonationalists. As a Tatar I find this clique taking power as one of the worst conceivable scenarios of the Russian future. Same for Khodorkovsky @mbk\_center

Much of the grudging acceptance of Putin by minorities is motivated by the fear of "liberals" (=consistent Russian ethnonationalists) taking power. Supporting regime change with Navalny taking the throne of Putin is utterly absurd from my perspective

While I participated in protests in Moscow, deep inside I found it problematic even back then. Yes, I want Putin to go. No, I am absolutely against @navalny taking his place. Actually I'm against anyone taking Putin's place. Changing "bad" Tsar for a "good" Tsar is not a solution
