

Mariia Kramarenko @KramarenkoMari3

Nov 21 · 6 tweets · KramarenkoMari3/status/1594666749013954561

The beginning. 26th of November 2013. Student from my university Kyiv-Mohyla Academy gathered to march through the streets of #Kyiv. We went to Taras Shevchenko park in front of Taras Shevchenko university to call other students to join the strike. After people headed to #Maidan.

<https://twitter.com/i/web/status/1594666749013954561>

The messages that Ukrainians have been sharing trying to reach international community to stop russian aggression. Almost 9 years have passed since, we are still fighting for our freedom and existence. #MaidanMassacre #Maidan

And to be honest all those memories don't bring joy, it brings pain. I remember that time well, I remember hearing about fist disappeared people, I remember how "titushki" were "hunting" for students from my university. I remember how my family tried to buy surgical equipment 1/4 to help injured on #Maidan while Yanukovich govt closed all pharmacies. I remember how our neighbor working in the hospital told that crematoriums worked non-stop. More than 300 people are still listed as missing, many activists were kidnapped and killed. 2/4

And still those responsible for killing are avoiding their punishment, they went to Russia, some of them came back as a part of russian troops in #Crimea and #Donbas. When Yanukovich fled it wasn't a relief, it was just the beginning of a years-long struggle of Ukrainian people. 3/

Btw, this is Yanukovich "palace" I visited on the second day after he fled to #Russia. Now it is a «museum of corruption». 4/4

...