The Russia's dissolution is way more realistic than you think.

What Will Russia's Dissolution Look Like and Should One Expect That?

The fall of empires is difficult to predict. Nevertheless, they regularly collapse, and Russia is likely to follow this pattern.

Starting from July 1991, 15 regions of the Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic (RSFSR) also declared their independence, including the regions of Bashkortostan, Tatarstan, Chuvashia, Komi, Mari El, Kalmykia, Sakha, Buryatia, Tuva, and Udmurtia. Regional constitutions of... <https://twitter.com/i/web/status/1634129412835639298>

The biggest share of Russian natural resources, which are largely sustaining Moscow's public budget, are located in Russia's ethnic minority regions. The Yamalo-Nenets autonomous region has the largest reserves of natural gas amounting to 40trln cm, followed by Astrakhan region... <https://twitter.com/i/web/status/1634129533539434496>

The USSR began to collapse when republican elites realised the disadvantage of continuing to hold on to Moscow. The first secretaries and Politburo members of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, for instance Aliyev in Azerbaijan, Shevardnadze in Georgia, Kravchuk in... <https://twitter.com/i/web/status/1634129717145096192>

It is impossible to predict what would be the last straw to break the camel's back. It could be protests triggered by the forced mobilisation of the youth in the North Caucasus, language discrimination and self-immolation of academics in Udmurtia region, or sexual assaults of... <https://twitter.com/i/web/status/1634130068992671746>

The most conservative theory of state law, the German doctrine, states that a sovereign country comprises three mandatory elements: all the national population (Staatsvolk), its territory (Staatsgebiet), and state power (Staatsgewalt). There are already several republics in... <https://twitter.com/i/web/status/1634130613706924032>
